

About the Authors

Jennifer M. Cunningham is Professor of English and the Writing Program Coordinator at Kent State University, where she oversees first-year composition and online writing instruction. She serves as an editor for Online Literacies Open Resource (OLOR) Effective Practices and has been an At-large Executive Board member of the Global Society of Online Literacy Educators (GSOLE) as well as the Chair of the Conference on College Composition and Communication (CCCC) Online Writing Instruction (OWI) Standing Group. Along with her research team, she has articles published in Composition Forum and College Composition and Communication. Her work has also been published in Written Communication, Computers and Composition, Online Learning, and the Journal of Response to Writing.

Mary K. Stewart is Associate Professor and the General Education Writing program coordinator in the Literature & Writing Studies Department at California State University San Marcos, where she teaches first-year writing and MA-level composition theory and pedagogy. Her research interests include hybrid and online writing instruction, writing program administration, and writing assessment.

Natalie Stillman-Webb is Professor-Lecturer in the Department of Writing and Rhetoric Studies at the University of Utah, where she coordinates an online major and serves as Co-Director of Undergraduate Studies. Her research and teaching interests include online writing pedagogy, user experience, community engaged learning, and writing in the disciplines. She has published in Computers and Composition, Kairos, and Journal of Business and Technical Communication, as well as in the edited collection Online Education 2.0: Evolving, Adapting, and Reinventing Online Technical Communication.

Lyra Hilliard is a Principal Lecturer in the Department of English at the University of Maryland, College Park, where she co-directs the online and blended teacher training program for writing faculty, is the online and blended learning coordinator for the Academic Writing Program, coordinates the Undergraduate Teaching Assistants program, and teaches professional, academic, and creative writing. Her research interests include online and hybrid writing pedagogy, faculty development, creative nonfiction, and women's rhetoric.