

Acknowledgments

I want to begin by expressing my gratitude to my participants. I especially appreciate their willingness to share not only the successful parts of their writing processes and publication experiences, but the challenges and difficulties. I am grateful that they were willing to share their processes and stories.

Special thanks to Indiana University of Pennsylvania for offering me a sabbatical in Spring 2023, which is how I was able to draft this book and engage in the extensive data analysis needed to do it well. Special thanks to those who supported my sabbatical including Hilliary Creely, Curtis Schieb, Gian Pagnucci, Bryna Seigel-Finer, Bethany Jackson, Gloria Park, and Omar Yacoub.

And speaking of that sabbatical and time for revising this book, I am grateful to my whimsical gnomish partner, Robert Pacitti, for his support. I am also grateful to Sue Morris in her friendship and creating a once-in-a-lifetime writing retreat.

I am grateful to my doctoral students and faculty in the composition and applied linguistics program, the Jones White Writing Center tutors, and the Center for Scholarly Communication consultants at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. I especially want to thank Islam Farag, who helped me collect the data on novice writers and who offered me feedback on earlier versions of this manuscript. Special thanks also to Krista Sarraf, one of my former doctoral students who is now a professor at Cal Polytechnic, who discussed flow states with me and shared her own cutting-edge flow research. Special thanks to my brother-in-law, Dr. Roger Beaty of the Penn State Cognitive Neuroscience of Creativity lab, for sharing and discussing cutting-edge brain research on creativity with me. I'm also very grateful to doctoral students in multiple sections of my ENG 880: Writing for Publication course who gave me feedback on activities, materials, content on earlier versions this book. I'm grateful to my graduate student co-authors who taught me a lot about their own ongoing writing processes: Daewoo Jin, Roger Powell, Omar Yacoub, Wenqi Cui, Jing Zhang, Islam Farag, and Andrew Yim. Very special thanks to CSC consultant Madeleine Rosa for her work in copyediting and proofing this manuscript.

I deeply appreciate the feedback from my writing group, Dr. Daniel Lawson and Dr. Genie Giamo. It certainly has been fun to all be working on our books together, sharing and learning.

I also want to offer my gratitude to my long-term Czech partners, Alena Kašpárková at VSB Technical University of Ostrava and Kamila Etchegoyen Rosolová at the Czech Academy of Sciences. We've been partnering for years to support multiple Czech universities to teach of writing for publication, dissertation supervision, and advanced writing support. This has provided me an international perspective and an opportunity to work with multiple universities and STEM disciplinary faculty, which has strengthened my own knowledge.

I want to thank my own mentors along my journey of learning how to write for publication and enter the field, starting with the amazing Anne Beaufort, who was willing to come out of retirement to write the foreword for this book. I am especially grateful for the mentoring and support of Linda Bergmann, Irwin Weiser, Shirley Rose, Richard Johnson-Sheehan, and Harry Denny. Thank you for believing in me when I was still so new in this field.

Finally, special thanks to everyone at the WAC Clearinghouse for making this book happen. Thank you to Mike Palmquist for his continual support of this project and willingness to answer all the questions I had throughout the process. I am also grateful to Aleashia Walton, Aimee Taylor, and Jagadish Paudel for their fantastic editorial feedback and support. Thanks as well to Don Donahue for copyediting the manuscript and to Heather Falconer for her management of the copyediting process. Special thanks also to four anonymous reviewers for their feedback in strengthening this work.