

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We are very grateful for the labor of University of Massachusetts Dartmouth Writing and Multiliteracy Center (WMC) tutors Sydney Cayer, Ray Davis, Andrew Ellis, Ella Gerardi, and Jesse Magnifico, who helped with the initial review of chapter proposals. Thanks to everyone at the WMC for their patience, curiosity, and thoughtful response to the emergence of generative AI our writing center space.

We also wish to thank Fordham English doctoral student Mark Host for his feedback and assistance with reviewing the initial full manuscript draft.

We're very appreciative of the support of the Perspectives on Writing series editors Michael Rifenburg, Rich Rice, Susan McLeod, Johanna Phelps, Jonathan M. Marine, and Qingyang Sun. Your enthusiasm for this project means so much to us. Much thanks as well to Mike Palmquist and everyone at the WAC Clearinghouse, especially our thorough and gracious copyeditor Sam Maloney.

We also extend our deep gratitude to all the contributors to this collection. It has been an honor learning from you and navigating this challenging moment together.

Finally, we thank our respective partners, Tom and Mel, who are beside us every step of the way. The love we found we carry with us, so we're never quite alone.
