

Notes on Contributors

CHRIS M. ANSON is University Distinguished Professor, professor of English, and director of the Campus Writing and Speaking Program at North Carolina State University. Chris has published 15 books and over 90 journal articles and book chapters and is on the editorial or reader's boards of ten journals, including CE, RTE, Across the Disciplines, Written Communication, Assessing Writing, and The Journal of Writing Assessment. He has recently co-authored a new book on digital literacies, Teaching Writing Using Blogs, Wikis, and other Digital Tools (Christopher-Gordon Publishers, 2009).

KARLA LYLES is a lecturer in the Writing and Linguistics Department at Georgia Southern University.

EMILY HALL directs the Writing Fellows program at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

BRADLEY HUGHES is director of Writing Across the Curriculum and director of the Writing Center at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

DARA ROSSMAN REGAIGNON is co-author of Writing Program Administration at Small Liberal Arts Colleges (forthcoming, Parlor Press), and also works on the rhetoric of maternity and paid childcare in Victorian Britain. She is director of College Writing and associate professor of English at Pomona College.

PAMELA BROMLEY is acting director of College Writing and assistant professor of Politics and International Relations at Pomona College.

IRENE L. CLARK is professor of English and director of Composition at California State University Northridge, where she is also in charge of the Master's degree in Rhetoric and Composition option. She has published articles in The Writing Center Journal, The Journal of Basic Writing, Teaching English in the Two Year College, College Composition and Communication, Profession, and Composition Forum. Her books include Writing in the Center: Teaching in a Writing Center Setting, (Kendall Hunt, 4th edition, 2008), Concepts in Composition: Theory and Practice in the Teaching of Writing (forthcoming in a second edition by Taylor and Francis), Writing the Successful Thesis and Dissertation: Entering the Conversation (Lawrence Erlbaum, 2007), and College Argument: Understanding the Genre (Kendall Hunt 2010). She is currently working on a book titled Genres of Academic Writing: Theoretical Insights, Pedagogical Opportunities.

ANDREA HERNANDEZ received her M.A. in Rhetoric and Composition from California State University, Northridge (CSUN), where she currently teaches first-year and developmental Composition and is a faculty writing consultant for CSUN's Writing Center.

TODD MIGLIACCIO is associate professor of Sociology at California State University, Sacramento.

DAN SELZER is associate professor of English and University Reading and Writing Coordinator at California State University, Sacramento.

JACOB BLUMNER is director of the Marian E. Wright Writing Center and associate professor of English at the University of Michigan-Flint.

PAMELA CHILDERS consults with secondary schools on WAC and writing centers and serves as executive editor of The Clearing House. She is Caldwell Chair of Composition Emerita of The McCallie School, where she directed the writing center and WAC program. Her books include The High School Writing Center: Establishing and Maintaining One (NCTE), Programs and Practices: Writing Across the Secondary School Curriculum (with Gere and Young), and ARTiculating: Teaching Writing in a Visual World (with Hobson and Mullin). Her articles and chapters have appeared in The Writing Center Journal, Across the Disciplines, Writing Lab Newsletter, Southern Discourse, and multiple WAC and writing center books. She is currently editing a special issue of Across the Disciplines with Michael Lowry on WAC in Secondary Schools.

CAROL RUTZ is director of the College Writing Program and senior lecturer in English at Carleton College. Her research interests include response to student writing, assessment of writing, and assessment of faculty development.